Brideshead Revisited

This book is a study of the first half of Evelyn Waugh’s career, from Decline and Fall to Brideshead Revisited. Unlike recent criticism, which regards Waugh as essentially a moralist, this book argues that Waugh’s characters are primarily motivated by personal demons and imaginative impulses.

Brideshead Revisited - Vol. 4 - from the novel by Evelyn Waugh

This thesis analyses the role of memory in Evelyn Waugh’s novel Brideshead Revisited to communicate experiences of loss. It traces the impact of trauma on its characters in the aftermath of the First World War in responses to grief, social disillusionment, modernity and despiritualization. It focuses on English society and culture during and relating to the interwar period with particular attention to the circumstances and experiences of the younger generation of the upper class. Brideshead Revisited makes a unique contribution to understanding the perspectives of the young generation of the interwar period and provides significant material for the study of the role of memory in fiction. Drawing connections between modern memory theory, modern and historic trauma theory, spirituality, modernity, place and war, and advancing the theory of subjunctive memory, this thesis examines the collective identity and trauma of Waugh’s generation through the examples of Charles Ryder, Sebastian Flyte and Jula Mottram in Brideshead Revisited. The Introduction of this thesis examines the motif of return and analyses the multiple layers of narrative and memory that merge in the novel. Chapter One looks at the relationship between place and narrative within the novel to elucidate Waugh’s disillusionment with the modern world during the...
Second World War. Chapter Two discusses the relationship between morality and motherhood as a method for discussing the use of feminine memory in the novel. Chapter Three analyses the narrative impact of the First World War to discuss the visibility of collective memory and generational trauma in the novel. Chapter Four examines the influence of Waugh's relationship with Alastair Graham on the development and memories of Sebastian Flyte. The Conclusion considers how the reader contributes to the layering of memory within the narrative and continues to shift the meaning of the novel.

This work interrogates the ongoing popularity of Catholic Modern novelist Evelyn Waugh's 1945 classic Brideshead Revisited as a novel that depicts the modern struggle to find hope and meaning in the midst of suffering after the widespread onset of modernity and decline of Christianity in the wake of World Wars I and II. I argue that Waugh's characterization of Sebastian Flyte, a lapsed Catholic aristocrat struggling with familial dysfunction and subsequent alcoholism, confounds both traditional models of sin as well as psychological frameworks of diagnosis. Employing close readings from the novel as well as historical and theological context, I demonstrate that Sebastian's suffering falls into the no-mans-land between modernity and spirituality, highlighting the failures of each to support healing and the importance of embracing suffering with compassion.

For Evelyn Waugh, -the loss of traditional values was both a symptom and a cause of religious decline, but the continuance of faith was ineluctable, the sole guarantee of mankind's place in the order of things.- (Auberon Waugh in the Foreword). The following study analyses three of Waugh's novels, "A Handful of Dust, Brideshead Revisited" and "Sword of Honour," in the light of a combination of themes as yet ignored by other critics. In order to demonstrate how much fact underlies Waugh's fiction, each novel is placed in the context of his life. Moreover, Waugh's own definitions of -traditional values- and -faith- as propounded in his novels have been compared with his views as expressed in his non-fictional works."

A beautiful clothbound edition of Evelyn Waugh's classic novel of duty and desire set against the backdrop of the faded glory of the English aristocracy in the run-up to the Second World War. The most nostalgic and reflective of Evelyn Waugh's novels, Brideshead Revisited looks back to the golden age before the Second World War. It tells the story of Charles Ryder's infatuation with the Marchmains and the rapidly disappearing world of privilege they inhabit. Enchanted first by Sebastian Flyte at Oxford, then by his doomed Catholic family, in particular his remote sister, Julia, Charles comes finally to recognise his spiritual and social distance from them. 'Brisk, lively and wonderfully entertaining' ] John Banville 'Excellent read this book' Literary Review 'The best single-volume life of the author available' Irish Times The much mythologised author of Decline and Fall, A Handful of Dust and Brideshead Revisited was hailed by Graham Greene as 'the greatest novelist of my generation', yet reckoned by Hilaire Belloc to have been possessed by the devil. Evelyn Waugh's literary reputation has continued to rise since Greene's assessment in 1966. Fifty years after his death, Philip Eade draws on extensive unpublished sources to paint a fresh and compelling portrait of this endlessly fascinating man, telling the full story of his dramatic, colourful and frequently bizarre life.

The title is a well-known quotation from Pope's An Essay on Criticism, "A little learning is a dangerous thing." In this unfinished work Waugh passes this observation of post-war society in Oxford: "It seems that now, after the second war, my contemporaries are regarded with a mixture of envy and reprobation, as libertines and wastrels." Excerpt: Brideshead Revisited, The Sacred & Profane Memories of Captain Charles Ryder is a novel by English writer Evelyn Waugh, first published in 1945. Waugh wrote that the novel "deals with what is theologically termed 'the operation of Grace', that is to say, the unmerited and unilateral act of love by which God continually calls souls to Himself." This is achieved by an examination of the Roman Catholic aristocratic Marchmain family, as seen by the narrator, Charles Ryder. In various letters, Waugh himself refers to the novel a number of times as his magnum opus; however, in 1950 he wrote to Graham Greene saying "I re-read Brideshead Revisited and was appalled." In Waugh's preface to the 1959 revised edition of Brideshead the author explains the circumstances in which the novel was written, in the six months between December 1943 and June 1944 following a minor parachute accident. He is mildly disparaging of the novel, saying; "It was a bleak period of present privation and threatening disaster - the period of soya beans and Basic English - and in consequence the book is infused with a kind of gluttony, for food and wine, for the splendours of the recent past, and for rhetorical and ornamental language which now, with a full stomach, I find distasteful." In the United States, Brideshead Revisited was the Book of the Month Club selection for January 1946. In 2005, it was chosen by Time magazine as one of the one hundred best English-language

Evelyn Waugh

Compiled on the occasion of Evelyn Waugh's centenary in 2003, this collection of essays shows a renewed critical interest in the author extended by scholars from both sides of the Atlantic. The contributions go back to an international symposium held at La Rioja University, 15-17 May 2003. Apart from traditional debate over questions of fact and interpretation, the book contains innovative approaches to Waugh's oeuvre, some of which make use of theories of discourse and media studies and denote an increasingly sophisticated awareness of his religious, political, and social contexts. Beginning with those essays presenting overviews of Waugh's life and work, and continuing with discussions of particular books in chronological order, this volume deals with a wide variety of aspects that confirm Waugh's rising status as a major twentieth-century classic.
